

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

The documentary is obviously biased in favor of Bush and should be considered nothing more than a pro-Bush campaign ad under the guise of a documentary. To pre-empt regularly scheduled viewing to air the documentary is a tremendously calculated effort to bias the american public against Kerry. And to claim that attempts by Sinclair to invite Kerry to "meet w/ POWs", is a load of crap. Did anyone not notice that Kerry SERVED in Vietnam? WHERE WAS BUSH?

That would make a far more interesting documentary.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.

Sincerely and Angrily,
